Simultaneously a thrilling sports movie, an insightful journey to a new world, and a lyrical personal story, Mystic Ball follows Greg Hamilton, the Canadian filmmaker, deep into the ancient and little-known culture of Myanmar and its traditional sport, chinlone.

It's a team sport without an opposing team, part dance, part meditation. There is no competition, no winners and no losers. The game is back-breakingly difficult, yet is played by almost all Burmese, from young children to octogenarians. 2006, 83 min Pg

Here's a brilliant film that MM was planning on screening May 26 that is particularly topical now.

The maker, Greg Hamilton, will be phoning in to talk about the film, the country, and his upcoming trip back there to personally deliver funds raised to the people in the film directly affected by the disaster. The film introduces you to these lovely people and their passion for this beautiful sport, bypassing (necessarily) the politics.

Here's a great way to assist in spite this crazy political situation that has turned people away from helping out these poor folks who have been clobbered by this calamity.
