The world will never be the same once you've seen it through the eyes of Forrest Gump.

Tom Hanks is Forrest
Gump

The script by Eric Roth, based on the novel by Winston Groom, follows roughly thirty years in life of Forrest Gump (played by a young Tom Hanks), Alabama man who has below-the-average level of intelligence. His mother (played by Sally Field) always taught him never to see that as disadvantage, and his simple perspective of world helps him not only to always do the right thing. Forrest also surprisingly prospers and [through some clever technology on-screen] appears in many key moments between 1950s and 1980s, meeting many important persons - Elvis Presley, George Wallace, JFK, Richard Nixon and John Lennon and many other pop icons - in the process.

It's about adapting to what you are. As "momma always said, 'Life was like a box of chocolates. You never know what you're gonna get.'" 142min 1994 Pg13
