

at MOVIE MONDAY

6:30 Monday June 30, 2014

GOING: Remembering Winnipeg Movie Theatres

In Winnipeg Cinema's heyday, there were almost fifty theatres operating in the city at one time, from the big showpiece venues downtown to the many more modest neighbourhood houses, (like Movie Monday).

Filmmaker George Godwin had two dozen choice Winnipeggers reminisce about an experience which largely disappeared as traditional theatres closed, to be replaced by multiplexes and other forms of entertainment.

You'll hear from people whose families owned theatres, people who worked in theatres, and most of all people, (just like you), who just loved to sit in the dark entranced by the images up there on the big screen.

2012 83min Pg Bring some of your early movie stories to share!

Director
George Godwin
calling in for Q&A!

at MOVIE MONDAY

6:30 Monday June 30, 2014

GOING: Remembering Winnipeg Movie Theatres

In Winnipeg Cinema's heyday, there were almost fifty theatres operating in the city at one time, from the big showpiece venues downtown to the many more modest neighbourhood houses, (like Movie Monday).

Filmmaker George Godwin had two dozen choice Winnipeggers reminisce about an experience which largely disappeared as traditional theatres closed, to be replaced by multiplexes and other forms of entertainment.

You'll hear from people whose families owned theatres, people who worked in theatres, and most of all people, (just like you), who just loved to sit in the dark entranced by the images up there on the big screen.

2012 83min Pg Bring some of your early movie stories to share!

Director
George Godwin
calling in for Q&A!

the Capital

the Capital

Nostalgic and very Winnipeggy, Going will appeal to people who have their own memories of the movie palaces near Portage and Main. In a larger sense, the film looks at a different media era, those pre-DVD, pre-download days when audiences shared what Godwin calls "the magical dark." - CBC Manitoba

www.moviemonday.ca

at the Eric Martin Pavilion Theatre 1900 Block Fort St - by donation

supported by:

Canada Council
for the Arts

Conseil des Arts
du Canada

Nostalgic and very Winnipeggy, Going will appeal to people who have their own memories of the movie palaces near Portage and Main. In a larger sense, the film looks at a different media era, those pre-DVD, pre-download days when audiences shared what Godwin calls "the magical dark." - CBC Manitoba

www.moviemonday.ca

at the Eric Martin Pavilion Theatre 1900 Block Fort St - by donation

supported by:

Canada Council
for the Arts

Conseil des Arts
du Canada