FINDING NORMAL

a film by Brian Lindstrom

It takes grit and grace to rebuild a life.

"Local filmmaker Brian Lindstrom is as uncompromising in his study of recovery as are the mentors who have rebuilt their lives and are now committed to helping others. What unfolds are intimate portraits of human triumph and failure...one of the finest films to come out of Portland in years." David Walker, film critic, Willamette Week

"...a thoroughly engrossing documentary by Brian Lindstrom about a group of Portland drug addicts and their rehab counselors trying day-by-day to keep themselves clean, sober and together. The film is raw and real, filled with undeniable moments of pain and elation and human personality. It's impossible to imagine a more honest look at this all-too-common world, and it's impossible, too, to understand how the film hasn't gotten exposed in a bigger venue." Shawn Levy, film critic, The Oregonian
